CUSTOMER REGISTRATION SYSTEM AND CORRESPONDING METHOD OF USE

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

The system includes a registration log and a sequence of registration labels (101-120) detachably secured to a first substrate (100). Each label has indicia (122) that identifies to the position of the label in the sequence and includes space in which the customer is to enter information. The log includes substrates (300), having a plurality of label-retaining spaces (301-320). Each space (301-320) includes indicia (324) that identifies the position of the space in the sequence of spaces and corresponds to a respective indicia (122) of a registration label. After a customer enters information manually on a registration label, the system user detaches the label from the substrate (100) and attaches it to a corresponding space in the registration log. The log is kept out of view of other customers to maintain confidentiality of customer information.

FTL1 #530298 v1